I want to finish off my general studies strong, graduate with my associate's degree, and transfer to a 4-year or tech school and become a radiologist. I do my best in my schooling and get decent grades, as well as making the presidents list last semester. I plan to continue at my job so I am able to support my son & I as much as I can because I do not receive help from his father or anybody else except the scholarships I receive. I do not really have a lot of time for extracurricular activities because I am a single mother and have my son full time, and I try to put my focus on him and the activities his school hosts so I can still be involved, as well as having our own hobbies outside of school and work. Financial assistance would really benefit not only me but my son during my schooling and would allow me to spend more time with him.
