I am pursuing a bachelors degree in business administration so I can learn the skills to become a leader in the office. My mother, who is my role model, has shown me how important higher education is and has also received her bachelors in business administration. I want to help play a part in my community and do what I can to help things run more efficiently. Accounting or finance are careers I would like to pursue, as numbers, problem-solving, and critical-thinking skills come naturally to me. It isn't the most thrilling, however I strongly believe that this degree will open doors for me with its diverse job opportunity.
