I am taking classes to get my Business degree, I would like to have more opportunities to better support my family. I eventually want to open a food truck with Lakota comfort food, which will hopefully branch out into a restaurant that I could start on or near the reservation so that I can start my own non-profit to help feed the people of my community, and teach them traditional cooking, and food. Right now I am a stay-at-home mom, and our income is limited, I rely solely on scholarships for my tuition, books, and any other education-based supplies. I take online classes, because I live out of state and have been saving to get a better computer because I know in my Senior year, my work load will increase.
